Macromolecular complexes, or macromolecular assemblies, are involved in almost every cellular process, and their functions rely heavily on their dynamic interactions with each other. The dynamic nature of these complexes is particularly well suited to the study of living cells. Using fluorescent tagging techniques, live cell imaging has been employed to capture various aspects of the assembly and function of macromolecular complexes. This technique is most often used to visualize macromolecular complexes in vitro, but with some modifications, it can be used to monitor the dynamics of macromolecular complexes in living cells.Q: Solving a new type of SDE I have the following ODE: $Sy'(t)=y(t)(\mu-y(t))$ The initial conditions are: $Sy(0)=0, y'(0)=0$ I need to solve this and I found the answer to be: $Sy(t)=t\mu$ However, I am not allowed to use derivatives on integrals and the solution has to be expressed as an integration. So how can I solve this type of equation? A: Let $Sx(t)=\mu t$. Then Sx is a solution of $Sy'(t)=y(t)(\mu-y(t))$, and its solution is $Sy(t)=\int_0^t e^{\int_0^s -\mu u ds} y(s) ds$ Now you can check that $Sx(t)=\mu t$ is a solution of $Sy'(t)=y(t)(\mu-y(t))$.
